Words of Encouragement

July 26, 2026

“The Lord is near to all who call on him, to all who call on him in truth.” (Psalm 145:18)

There is something deeply comforting in knowing that God does not measure our closeness to Him by our eloquence or spiritual performance. He measures it by the honesty of our hearts.

Psalm 145:18 tells us that the Lord is near to all who call on Him in truth. Not in perfection. Not in theatrics, but to all who come in truth.

This is not about having perfect faith or flawless words. It is about sincerity. God meets us in our honesty, not our pretense. This means you can come to God with doubts and still be heard. You can come with confusion and still be welcomed. You can come exhausted, frustrated, or uncertain, and our God does not turn away. He is near to those who call on Him honestly.

We often assume prayer must be polished or that our approach to God must be carefully constructed. We sometime think before we pray, we need to wait until we have more faith, more clarity, or more composure. But God is not asking for a performance. He is asking for truth.

*“God has a plan for our lives, and surrendering to Him means we set aside our own plans
and eagerly seek his.”*

When you call on God in truth, you are not pretending everything is fine when it is not. He does not require you to clean yourself up first. He asks that you come honestly, and to bring Him what is real. And that is exactly where He meets you.

This is the beauty of relationship with our God. It is not transactional. It is not about earning His presence through right behavior or right words. The God who holds creation together listens when you call upon Him. The King of Kings hears every whispered prayer.

If you have been hesitant to pray, this verse is for you. Take a moment today to talk to God with complete honesty. Tell Him what you are really feeling (not what you think you should feel). God is near. He is not far off waiting for you to improve.

God is already close, ready to hear you, the moment you call!
